The Compendium of Thought

The Nature of All Things – Introduction

Nature is a word that represents the interconnectedness of life and how all things are balanced and in harmony with each other. Nature is a law and a force unto its own and moves in a harmonious way because it moves independent of the comings and goings of gods and beings. You know that as I say this there is also of course the greater mind creating nature that we are all part of, and that greater mind is the creator, that beautiful God that created the playgrounds of life, the universe, the star, space, the space to create within, the framework of life everywhere. Nature came about because God determined that it would require a place where it could experience all its divine creations and nature is not limited to one planet or set of natural laws on that planet.

Nature is everything, including the physical representation of beings that live within nature. Nature exists in the mind and as it exists in the mind it exists as the materialised realities. It is not nature when it can't be experienced. The nature of all things is that God is in all things, everything holds God. Without nature you would be merely a blob of consciousness floating around in the void, so it should be applauded and loved that God has given such a rich playground with which you get to form your creations in, and to experience.

Were you to understand the first mind that created nature, you might go some way to loving the meaning in this interconnectedness of all life. When God created nature, it created you and because you and God are one you created nature. This means that nature will always be your greatest teacher because it is God reflected back to you – everywhere. And you are immersed in nature always, even your greatest creation that comes from the quietness of your mind comes as a reality based on nature, or it wouldn't have anywhere to exist. When you love nature everywhere, you love God, and when you love God, you love nature, and nature includes all beings, all creatures, all life.

This section of our Compendium of Thought is in place to understand the depth with which God communicates with you, and to realise that every moment you and God are one just by observing and recognising nature in your life. The nature of all things is God and if you deny this or question it then - what is nature? It is so easy to forget that God is looking out your eyes every moment, picking up the peripheral reality, storing knowledge and experiences whether you are on a distant star taking in the foreign atmosphere and looking into space that goes on forever, or in a garden where the flowers bloom. This is God looking back at you everywhere, you can't escape it. You can learn to see it for what it is, and the more that you see it for what it is, the richer it will become. The hues behind the hues, the energy beyond, the structure of the materialised form, and the communication between the connectedness of nature, will start to reveal itself.

Bit by bit you will see in your world around you evidence of the elegant nature of God and how interconnected all life is – everywhere. If you are fortunate enough to breathe the perfume of a flower, think for a moment what miraculous state of chemical release would have to go on to bring that perfume into life. And how it would travel on the breeze and reach you and enrich your mind with such wonder at its beauty in that moment. This is God touching you in the simplest of ways. Or when you walk along and feel a leaf brush against your face and breeze on your skin, a warmth from the sun, this is God touching you. And when you stand on the top of a mountain and the air is crisp and clear and cool and you breathe that richly into your lungs, this too is God touching you. And if your air is heavy and stale and stagnant, this is God touching you because at the same time the breeze passes over your arm, the sunlight graces your skin and your eyes catch a tiny blade of grass creeping through the pavement cracks. Nature is everywhere. You can't escape it because this is God in all things.

In this section we will open doors to the subtle messages of nature and the profound ways that they are communicating as God. Sometimes subtle, sometimes direct - always communicating and letting you know it is there as yourself, as God, as nature, as one.

The Nature of All Things - Chapter One

One of the most magnificent things about nature is its presence in the now. All nature holds inert within it the ever present now, whether it is a rapidly moving stream or a giant oak tree, nature is always in the now. You can't make it hurry or slow down even with the tampering by human intervention into genetic modification of plants or species. For nature it doesn't care, it is just now, it doesn't have an opinion of whether it likes what you do. In this chapter we are going to move carefully step-by-step into plants and any other natural substances that are utilised to create a state of hallucinogenic mind.

Take the first proviso that God is all things, and nature is God's creation as are you, then you have created these plants or substances that form a hallucinogenic field. There are entities outside of humanity that richly thrive in a hallucinogenic field. This is their reality and their desire for you is to communicate the magic of the imagery that occurs from that field. They want to share with you, what they don't understand is that the human mind is a sensitive finely balanced organism and tipping the balance of the chemicals within that mind will be like tipping chemicals down your drain and polluting your waterways. Sometimes they will be flushed free and diluted so the effect is minimised or negated, other times they will create issues within the finely balanced organism of nature.

God is all things and it is these plants, and these plants are there for you to experience if you so choose. If your mind can move as these plants, then you will be able to flow with the chemicals. If your mind cannot understand the connection, the risks are high. The reason to include this in The Compendium of Thought in this time flow is because the desire for evolution and expansion of consciousness is escalating rapidly and it is a figment of the hallucinogenic field that leads the individual, human, to believe it can shortcut its evolution through these chemical shifts. The mind is a wonderful organism and the ingestion of substances that link to pathways in that brain that activate the hallucinogenic field that these other entities reside in, can have detrimental effects on the individual, and recovery can be slow.

Just as God would pass you an opportunity to observe the nature of life through the sunlight and the flower and that you are touched by God in all moments, the decision to ingest hallucinogenic products of nature will be for the same reasons. There is no wrong in doing so, there is only caution in understanding how it is that you choose to relate to nature, and it relates to you.

The Nature of All Things - Chapter Two

The plant ayahuasca can't be talked about unless you also include numerous other plants and substances that are available in your natural world. The earth provides an infinite amount of opportunities for ingestion into the physical human body, and if you looked at all the different natural products, creatures, or plants that are ingested or laid upon the body, you would see that this body has been physically experimented with in so many different ways. Whatever the substance is that is ingested, or laid upon, or sniffed through the body has a chemical effect on the body - foods into sugars, stimulants, pacifiers, hallucinogens, smoke fields that open other chemicals in the brain. Whatever it is that the body has subject itself to, is under the direction of the God housing the body. You cannot lay any blame on the substances that are available for that ingestion and for that experience. All that it is, is that God has offered nature to be experienced and nature can be experienced in a myriad of ways.

The crushing of cartilage of a bone of an animal to create a substance that can be ingested or taking the poison out of the spine of a sea creature that can also be ingested, it seems to be unfathomable that these many variables can exist, and yet they do. The human body is an extraordinary organism because it can take in these elements of nature to offer an experience to that body that is to be had in whatever way it is - to sleep, to be hyperactive, to be joyful, to be well, to relieve pain. It is so numerous to have longevity, to increase the skin, the blood, the bone. There are so many ways that the human body can ingest its nature to affect it. If we can judge any single plant as being over and above any other, we would not be seeing the totality of how nature has provided these opportunities for the God in that body to have these experiences. None of them are wrong, they are merely experiences to be had in a certain period of time by that individual in that body.

Once those experiences have been had - dependent on where the individual is born, what culture they live in, what foodstuffs are available, what belief systems surround those foodstuffs and those plants - those experiences will be recorded as knowledge within the soul of the entity as to the effect on that body. It is an experiment that that God is having with a physical body on the earth in many different ways. In one lifetime you could live as a shaman and take countless types of plant medicines, liquids from the natural world that hold you in an extraordinary state of hallucinogenic field. In another lifetime you come with that wisdom intact via your soul and you know what it did to your body that other time, so perhaps you live on meat and three vegetables for your whole life - a simple plain experience. Or you drink too much and find out what happens to a liver, or you eat too much and find out how the fat cells store that excess food, or you excessively eat sugar and discover what the insulin in a body does and what gets destroyed based on that. Or you take in excess amounts of fats that do unusual things to the arteries in the body.

You are observing this physical mechanism all the time from within yourself and how the things that you put in or on it, or expose it to, impacts it physically. You are playing through your own experiments on your body and bodies through lifetimes and this is why some people will incarnate and never ever touch drugs of any sort because they know what it did to their body the previous lifetime, or lifetimes. Or they will incarnate with pale white skin because they know what it felt like to have leathery dark skin and expose it to sun light and they want to know what it is to have a different outer coating.

The trend if it is indeed towards a product of nature called ayahuasca is no other than gods in bodies choosing at this time to experiment on their body and find out what happens. They may die, they may get very ill, they may destroy componentry in their brain, but when they finish that lifetime, they will have that wisdom recorded as to what happens to this body when it gets affected by such things. They may open the pineal and the pituitary gland to the point that it is always open, and they will live in a shamanic life richly expressive in deep understandings based on the way that those chemicals opened those pathways in their brain. This is why if the entity is aware, in tune with whatever it may be that they are taking into their body - particularly if it lays in the fields of brain altering, chemical altering - if they are aware of what it is doing, and they take it with that knowingness they will move through that experience with an open mind able to reflect on the experience as it is occurring, and not subjecting their body to the effects of it without awareness.

Ayahuasca is just a name of a plant that has an extraordinary chemical structure that when you take it into your physical body, it will release chemicals through your brain that blast holes into the subconscious mind. Those holes may never be repaired, in other words you will always have that access, but it is up to the individual who is experimenting on its body in that lifetime to navigate whether that is the best way for them to access the subconscious mind, the greater mind. There are other ways to approach this. The greatest wisdom to take from this is whatever you put in or on, or ingest through the breath, smell, is your experiment in learning great wisdom on what happens to this biological form that you house your God self in.

Your divine spirit is for ever and ever, so for the period of time that you choose to abuse, or use, or indulge, or love your physical body in that incarnation, recognise that you are using it. If you can't get enough of the chemical high, in whatever way that comes to you, your God, that incredible intelligence that you are, is calculating accurately the ongoing impact of that chemical high on every single cell in the body and how it increases or decreases the innate cellular structure of that body. It is recording all of this as wisdom over and over. Now that you know this, trust in your greater knowing to lead you down the right paths for your experiences and know when you've had enough, because that could be your God's way of telling you to get out before too much damage is done.

You cannot tell someone how to look after their own body, only they can do that. You can tell someone that everything they do to that body is being recorded as their wisdom. If you integrate more of your greater mind, the great mind of God, you will start to be able to observe what it is that your God knows when you take in anything. You will be able to start to observe how the effect of the stimulant opens, shuts, illuminates, stimulates. You will be able to understand why in a moment the body is desirous of a sugar, or a caffeine hit, or a fat, or water. You will become so attuned to the mind of God that it will be you observing, not controlling but observing, as God, what is going on with your biological experiment moment to moment. So, the next time you look for a fast track into enlightenment, ask your God - what are we going to learn that will best evolve the spirit and the body, and not one independent of the other?

The Nature of All Things - Chapter Three

Living and dying. To God there is no life there is no death, there is just creation. From the mind of God, it does not see death as anything different to life, it sees it as one continual creation that has different shapes, and forms, and phases in it. It is merely an expression of a way of being at a certain point in reality where it is considered to be life or death. From the mind of God, it is all creation. If you understand that the mind of God sees only creation then the reprieve from any state of dying or deterioration or death would be released from the consciousness because you too would see it as the mind of God is understanding it, which is, it is all creation.

The determination of nature to continue to thrive through all states of being, means that it understands that dying is the same as living and that it can lose its life only to be reborn again in any moment. It does not hold onto the concept that living is the only stated reality, it understands itself as nature which is ongoing and eternal just as God created it to be. Now who is this great God that created life - living and dying - and understood that it is all creation? Of course, it is none other than you, and me, and all other life, beings that recognise and know the truth of who they are. If you know the truth of who you are - that you are one as God, and not a separate creation made by God, but merely an expression of it - it means that you are as much living and dying simultaneously. If you know then that you are living and dying then you realise that your self, your created nature, is an ever fluid moving experience and that you don't have to hold onto life to avoid death or to fear death.

You too can observe your entire reality as creation. This means you can look at every state of dying you may have ever experienced, whether it be death of the physical form, death of a loved one close by, death of a consciousness, death of a reality, death of a time, death of a planet, the extinction of any piece of nature that may catch your eye. Do you really think that a million years ago they had the same plants and trees and animals that you have now, and do you think that nature mourns for the loss of what was here a million years ago and what is here now? And do you think that in a million years time forward from now, all those same creatures will be here? Perhaps they are different hues and shapes, lighter, darker, brighter. Do you think that they would look back to you now and be so sad that you are dead, or that the flower they knew back then is not here for it to be recognised any longer? This is not the way. It is an eternal state of living and dying and it moves like the waves ebbing and flowing - up in life, down in death. To God it is all the same, it is merely creation and inside of each moment, the up or the down, is a different experience. When you are dead in your physical body if that may be the case you don't disappear as the God that you are. You are electing in that moment to experience a different created reality.

If we take the nature of all things and recognise that all things as they are in nature move and flow, does it mean then that we start to understand and recognise that we too are nature - biological in body, shape and form and that the body can disappear into dust and just like nature in a million years, will not look back and mourn for what it was? We will merely be what we are in that time. When you die you never look back at what you had here because you are nature and you understand how it is to be nature. The tree with its leaves that fall and disintegrate into the dirt is just like you, the difference is you haven't learned this simple fact that nature knows that they are the same thing - living and dying. To walk into the freedom of a state of being where you are eternal life is a recognition that you know what God knows about the created nature of all things and you can no longer separate yourself from whether you are living or dying.

You are simultaneously all those states and you know that the one you are in, whether that be the new bud blossoming on the corner of the tree branch, or one very deep into the soil sleeping until it bursts forth again, you are present where that is and experiencing it as that is and you are not mourning the differences. You have died many times and you will die many times and those deaths may be different as you move forward. You may live thousands of years then pass out of this body into another body, into another place, into another time. You will still leave behind a state of being that you were and move into one that you then are. It is only the simple mind of consciousness that is unable to comprehend such things and will fight for the state where it is and hold on thinking it can't possibly be any different or better when it moves out of that state.

But one little moment beyond the little mind and you will be able to see all of this and find the peace of that eternal state of change that is living and dying. It is observed everywhere and when you look at your little old ladies or little old men, all you are seeing is change - change of times, change of forms, change of experiences. And if they have done that change thousands of times before, the nature of all things will dictate that they will change again. One day they may die and float to a different change, a different life where they wear robes of light or etheric like wafts of air on the breeze. It doesn't matter how it is that they have moved. What you can always know is that it will change because everything is held as the mind of God and the mind of God knows that living and dying are part of the state of nature of all things. Neither is held but merely allowed to be free in its expression and to move forth without looking backwards at what was, but to be firmly placed in that great state of where it is.

This body, this time, this place, wherever you are is your eternal now. Recorded in your eternal now is all this wisdom pouring forth into the being that you are right now that has recorded everything like the veins on the leaf, filled with knowledge, filled with wisdom, filled with information of who you are. You just need to open your eyes to see it and know it. Open up the palms of your hands and look at the lines on them and think about the veins in the leaf and how it knows everything about being that leaf and eternal life which is the nature of all things. Its cycle through living and dying, in form or just in change, we give to God as we are everything that we know, and in return we give back to our self our next state of nature, our next state of being, to richly endow who we are. Such is the nature of all things and the mind of God.

The Nature of All Things – Precision

One of the things that you can easily observe in nature is its innate precision and its perfection on how the minutest details are put together - from the petals of the flower to the cells in the beehive, to the molecules of water, or a snowflake. These are all common images and every time you see these images you are observing the perfection with which nature is put together and the precision on the minute scale. If you go further into those things, that precision becomes even more accurate. You start to find the veins on the leaf and then within the veins the way the tiny little cells all link up together, and within the cells you have the chromosomes that all attach, and within that you have those strands of DNA all perfectly formed. Within that there is this tiny atomic structure also perfectly formed, balanced, spinning. And that is in the microcosm.

When we build it out from beyond the flower, it's how those flowers all sit beside each other in one little patch, how the forest of trees is balanced with the soil beneath it, the rock face carefully placed beside a waterfall and how that water runs down and flows into a stream that reaches into an ocean, which builds life for the sea creatures. And so on and so forth. And then we build it out further and see how that planet has an orbit. Then we see how the other planets orbit around the suns and the moons. Then we go further, and we see how that solar system fits into its greater reality. All of nature has this perfection and precision holding all those pieces together and that precision came from great minds. Was it all just placed with the hope that it would sit in the right place beside each other or was there an overarching plan that as each piece was built - created so we say - it fit neatly with the others?

And how did that precision start in any other way other than the nature of all things that determines and understands that this precision will always be in place and that everything will always fit together and be held together as a greater whole. That is the simplest law of nature and everything is part of that. There are no anomalies, it is all under this one guidance that everything fits together as a greater whole and the way that that simple understanding plays out through nature shows that this guidance - if we want to call it that - ensures that everything is exactly where it is meant to be, always.

If it becomes that an entire planet disappears, nature will create the balance once again and something new will come because everything fits into the totality. The reason that we can know this is because of God and the wholeness of life of which we all are, is held together with that precision that only God could create. This is why everything is so perfect in nature. Even when we fight against nature, in a thousand years we will see that there was always perfection. The reason that there was always perfection is because of this one thing and the best way to understand it is, in this one moment right now, as the mind of God that you are freeze-frame everything into this one single moment and observe the entire frozen reality - the multiverses, the universes, the intraverses - the everything frozen in this one moment and you will see the same perfection as the flower and the petals because it all fits together or it wouldn't be there.

The Nature of All Things - Change is in the Air – Part One

When you knew you were going to start this work as being a human being, you didn't know necessarily that you were going to be so exquisite. You may not have realised that your presence in nature is as symbiotic as every other piece of nature. Your self-centred and indulgent recognition of yourself puts you by being a human at the forefront of nature always in your thoughts, despite the greatest intentions to move beyond this. When you decided to start this great work as yourself in a human body, the way that you elected to move yourself past what nature is, is an extraordinary feat in itself, one that very few entities have the capacity to do let alone hold continually.

On most planets the interconnectedness between the species of choice and the planetary forms that are there that support that life are symbiotic in natural order and are recognised as the way that they connect with each other and communicate. This human form is so alienated from its own planet, for the most part, that your knowing around how nature operates is limited to say the least. Ancient indigenous cultures of course retain much more wisdom around the interconnectedness with the planet and their own physical body than most of the current human race. If you communicate with nature, nature will communicate with you. Once you start to communicate with nature the symbiotic relationship builds ever greater pathways inside your physical expression and you become an ever-greater conduit of nature of the planet. And when you are a conduit of nature, it means that you are making the greatest decisions in your life that are no longer self-centred and indulgent. So, whilst you will move and think as an individual, because you are finally in symbiosis with the planet, the nature, everything you do, think, act, create, is in harmony with that planet even though you still recognise those actions and thoughts as individual.

It is the self-indulgent aspect of the human being that has been so cleverly created for its experiences that holds it independent from that harmony. Where we moved to in the future, and in some cultures as it already exists, the thinking creating human that the thoughts come through into the brain, the physical brain, are already attuned with the nature. Because they are already attuned with the nature of the planet it is not a possibility to have thoughts coming into that brain that aren't conducive to the whole. This way the mechanism of the brain is interlinked with the entire planet, rather than the separate cavities that are running in the current majority of the populace. Those separate cavities are running because the brain is not communicating with itself, it's not making enough connections inside of it as a mechanism. Because it's not making enough connections it remains disconnected from the natural planet and the order that is on the natural planet.

Your future being - human capacity of body - will not have this issue. This is independent of consciousness, spirit, greater mind. This is talking about the physical body and what it is now going to be tuned to be as. In many races this was bred out or overridden by the incoming layers of consciousness that were determined to put into place a reality on this planet that would go through all the changes that it has been through, through the course of time. When we were creating the planet and we envisaged the species that would be on the planet, it was always going to be a species that would be of the planet. And because that species was always going to be of the planet it would have to be in communication with the planet. It was not in the original design to have it in any other way. That design in latter periods was what changed and disjointed the physical human body from the nature that it lives in and you are a product of that disjoint. Your work in consciousness builds back around to be more like the original design that was envisaged - not necessarily created, envisaged - for the species on that planet.

Let's make it into a very simple example. If you were to create a planet as the God that you are with all the nature it had on it, and a species of being, bodies that could be inhabited by entities to have life on your planet that you have created, what God would create that those species were not intimately interwoven with the planet? In some cases, species that visit from other planets and come to an existing planet and take on those bodies, don't have the same affinity to the planet. This is easily understood in terms of consciousness but what is not understood is why the physical mechanism of the human body is not more finely attuned to the planet. It is attuned to the planet; it has just been carefully overridden over time so that you have less and less receptive receivers of your interconnectedness with the planet.

Again, leads to the question - who would override or choose to create a planet that had a species that was disjointed from the physical nature of the planet it lives upon? It would be coming from entities that had no vested interest in the life forms on that planet in any way shape or form. They could not have a vested interest in the planet if they didn't care in some way that the species that lived on the planet was connected or disconnected. If you think that there are beings that care for the earth, there are, but none care for the earth more than those that live on it. Those that live on it are the only ones that can reformulate that interconnectedness with nature and bring it back so that that brain, that beautiful human brain, is interwoven and communicating with nature and receiving communications back all the time, not just when it wants to - all the time.

It will become as simple as sensing the time of day or when you are hungry. When you cease to be so self-indulgent, and realise the interconnectedness that you have, you will move more freely with this planet than ever before once these pathways are rebuilt in the human brain. This can't be completed until the nature of all things becomes reintegrated into the consciousness, because without it reintegrating into the consciousness, without it becoming part of that river of thought it is connected with, we won't be able to re-establish those pathways in the human brain because they are far too damaged, or cut, or disintegrated - however you want to describe that - in the majority of the species. Even those that have an affinity to indigenous cultures who are closer in connection to the planet, are not able to activate those pathways in themselves as fully as they need to be activated because they have been so severely hindered for so long in the genetics of what they are carrying.

Entities will have an affinity to indigenous cultures, a love for the words, a feeling that it makes sense, a feeling they wish to be part of that ethos, but without the genetic makeup or their componentry that is pure - I need to use that term - not diluted over and over but is held pure, without that componentry absolutely held within the brain, it will be like a fairy-tale romance. A romantic ideal to be like those indigenous cultures, but it will not activate that direct communication between the brain of the species and to the planet. And you wonder why it is so difficult to live on this planet for most people, and they feel unhappy.

The Nature of All Things - Change is in the Air – Part Two

In a planet where the symbiotic relationship exists, there is harmony between the nature of the species and the planet. What happens is unlike the majority of your pictures you have in how wonderful it is that a native culture relates to nature and lives in this very simple seemingly harmonious way. It is nothing like that. The reason to understand this is because too much of the consciousness thinks that to reinstate this balance with nature you go into the “olden days”, or back when it was like this. The nature on other planets as an example, when it is working in this symbiotic style all the ideas for creation that come into that species are created by nature in harmony with that planet. This means that great extraordinary technology, infrastructure, social systems, food sources, regeneration sources, energy sources, transportation if necessary, everything, is built from a brain - if it is a brain in that particular planet - from the componentry of the thinking part of that body, that is already in alignment with the nature of that planet. It is a created reality where life can thrive, evolve, grow, increase, decrease, whatever life chooses to do, but it is all happening in harmony with the planet.

So we take this vision and we now overlay that on to the future of the earth and all the beautiful entities that have that affinity to ancient indigenous cultures because it sings to their spirit to have that way of being in harmony with the earth. We overlay this knowingness onto the planet so that all those entities that have that affinity can now start to integrate the consciousness - remember it's not about the wiring just yet - that future evolution and technology and creation have potentials that are in harmony with the planet. And they are made with an awareness, not just of the microcosm of the living part that the human is in. It is not country specific, it is not street specific, it's actually that that is in harmony with the entire globe.

This is how it operates on other planets and if it operates like that on other planets it is not too much of a reach I wish to say, to integrate that model across onto this planet. The model is so simple, in that you're not taking the technology of another planet that would be too foreign and too far beyond what the earth is on at the moment to take on. But what you are giving across that dimensional shift between planet to planet, or locational shift between planet to planet, is the wisdom that a species of beings can evolve and become the most extraordinary in all realms of thinking and be completely in harmony with the nature of the planet because that is the nature. This will include - coming back to our non-earth planet - the understanding of the way time moves on the planet, and how life grows and goes into its demise and then reforms; it includes all that knowledge.

The mind of those entities on that planet are not attached to their creations, if they be physical, because they know how when something is born of, it can still go down and reform. Their creations are created into something that can reform, unlike what you have on earth where you create disposables that never reform in thousands and thousands of years, and they deform and destroy. You have the concept of not being attached to your creations, ad nauseam, because you so effortlessly churn stuff over. But the stuff that is being created has not taken on any of what this understanding is because it is not even closely wired to the brain. So, we take this planetary understanding over here where the species are hardwired to be in a relationship with nature that is symbiotic - hardwired.

There are a few ways that this integration could take place. You could send an 'away team' over to that planet to integrate with that knowledge and then bring them back - probably unlikely. You could wait on earth for this hardwiring to take place. If billions and billions of people on one planet do not understand this, you could be waiting quite a while. The great desire for this shift in consciousness is in part because the hope is that this rewiring will take place quicker. But it might not happen quick enough so many entities on the planet Earth, as they raise their consciousness are raising it to depart, because their nature is in recognition of a greater whole and the greater whole that they are in recognition of transcends the earth planet and that physical body they have been inhabiting. So, in the end nature preserves itself wherever itself may be - on earth or off earth - because as you raise your consciousness you will naturally become more aligned and attuned to the nature of all things, to the gentle flow of life. Once you are more aligned with this beautiful and gentle flow of life, which you can feel like a hum through your being, it doesn't matter to you where you reside because you are tuned into a greater force of nature than what is laying on the planet.

What you are recognising now is - how much of who I am is bound to be on the earth and how much of the nature of myself is in alignment with a greater harmony of life that is at interplay everywhere. The hardwiring in yourself is aligned with the consciousness that understands living and dying, creation of solar systems and galaxies and universes, and how they all weave in together, and, that you are the indigenous race of beings of this part of that galaxy. Why is it that these words sing with such harmony inside of you? Because you can feel the effortless with which you move with nature once you are not bound to the earth. You know within you that the componentry of that physical human body you currently wear, has not, and almost cannot change quick enough to bring it into complete symbiotic relationship with the planet when so many others are not able to do so. So, the greater whole is preserving itself as nature and the one that resides inside of that human body is determining where it is going to be based on the nature of all things and its interplay with them. As it is so it is.

The Nature of All Things - Change is in the Air – Part Three

Inside the earth there is a great hollow cavity, affectionately termed middle earth. When we consider connecting with middle earth it brings to us a similar state of harmony as when we realise where we are in that greater nature. This indicates then that it really is only on the surface of this planet that such disjointed humans exist with so many impartial understandings of how life is such a gift and wear that body with the dismay and the disgust as if it is another broken plastic toy to throw away when they have had enough of it. So now when you know that inside the earth and outside the earth the harmony is not just conceivable but felt by yourself, why is it so difficult to bring that same harmony in between?

At what point can we, can you, integrate the same feeling you get when the term middle earth is offered? That innate sense is that there are beautiful beings, curious lands, unique adventures, and species that live in middle earth who truly know how to be in harmony with the nature of all things. Refer to our beautiful chapter with the Elven kind and you will start to get that same feeling because you know where they are. Does this mean then that your earth is like a flat two-dimensional plane that you pretend to have wrapped around the globe, but it is as flat and meaningless in terms of nature as a piece of paper? Can we create an earth that feels more like a sponge under your feet than a dense layer of gravity that keeps you disconnected? Can you envisage an earth that is more like a movable grid than our solid fixed state of reality?

Once you break the fixed solid state of reality that you believe is the surface of your earth that you walk upon, stand upon, and live upon, will your separation from nature just disappear because suddenly the beautiful entities in middle earth and the great upliftment that your consciousness feels when you contemplate being off the earth merge? And you too can think about the earth and its inhabitants with nothing other than the same glorious uplifting feeling? This is a stretch because it goes against the paradigm of reality that is known in this moment; a stretch to feel the entire planet with the same wondrous connection with life and to hardwire the knowingness into every brain that it is one with life.

The entities in middle earth will never come to the surface because they know what you live with every day in the unacknowledged feeling of being on this planet. They know that every day you live without knowing - it's not even recognising or thinking about or trying to think about. They know that you live every day without knowing the feeling of being connected with such a divine planet in its entirety. You can pray for mother Gaia, you can chant, you can communicate with the earth, you can ground, you can hold, you can love, but the innate self does not wake up every single day knowing what it feels like to be one with this planet. This is felt everywhere like an ache through reality, through such loss that an entire species - save a few - does not feel home on their planet in the true nature of that meaning because it is not in them to harmonise with it in its entirety.

All you need to do to understand this is find one example where an entity on this planet can feel the tree. Many, many, many, will sit under the tree and feel the life force in the tree, simultaneously feeling everything else that is going on in life on that planet - the movement of the ants, the sound of thunderstorms on the other side of the globe, the shift in the polar melt, the heating in some places, the rain that tumbles down. When you can feel all of this you are one with the nature of all things as it is shown to be on this planet, but you can't feel that every day because that is not who you are in this body.

When you raise your consciousness there is a state where you feel connected with all things and you are because your consciousness is connected. This is harmonious to you because you can feel that beauty in that glorious place where you understand the connectedness. But the moment you come back to sit in your body, you have to work to maintain that connectedness because your body is not connected. This is one of the reasons it is so difficult, as proposed and thought in this moment, to move from a human to an enlightened being because your body makes it difficult for one reason. And this one reason is because you are so disconnected from nature, which is disconnected from life, and life is God.

The Nature of All Things - Change is in the Air – Part Four

Standing at the edge of time, if you knew that there was a whole planet with the majority of the inhabitants so disconnected with the nature of living on that planet, and mostly without recognition of how closely connected they are with that planet, how would you go about changing this situation other than a complete overhaul of the species that is there? When you know whom you are and the mind that you hold, you actually see the way that this beautiful planet with these disjointed humans on it, is part of life. When you build it into the greater nature of life and you watch the other planets - with or without life on them - and what is happening there, and how new creations are formed, and then you look at this little planet called Earth from that greater mind, in some way you could only understand that this too is part of life.

It's only when you take out your magnifying glass and get a little closer that you see the disillusionment of that place. So, you took your magnifying glass and you looked a little closer and what you realised is the recognition that the balance in all nature that you are currently observing from that macro vision and feeling, is the way it is all harmonised together. Something drew your attention to place a magnifying point of reference onto this little thing called Earth. And as you drew your reference there, you knew that this earth was poised to change because it was going through a metamorphosis. The reason you knew this is because the vision that you hold is the vision of an entire macro reality where the earth in your scope vision is like its own caterpillar. What you see from that expanded viewpoint is the comings and goings of life everywhere, the nature of all things everywhere, the interconnectedness, the symbiotic relationship of all things everywhere, of every planet, of every galaxy, of every universe. You see and know all of that and you know that just as everything balances itself in harmony as nature does in its own divine way, that little planet is going to change. You know that and you don't know how it is you know that when you are on the planet as well as you do when you are off the planet.

What you do know when you are on the planet is that the change has started to happen. You can feel that within every part of your physical incarnated body. So perhaps and indeed defined as it is, your physical manifested body is more connected with the nature of all things than it ever has been because it is finally receiving the innate knowing that changes are happening, and it is part of that change. That sense of change that runs thick in lots of people on the planet at this time is coming from your bodies, not your divine consciousness primarily. It is your bodies that are telling you this is happening because your bodies are connected to the planet and the planet is changing. This seemingly small realisation is enough to break the separation that has gone on between your body and the planet for too long. So not only is the change about changing consciousness - that is for the spirits - the change is going on in your bodies starting with the simple basic recognition that - I can feel change coming. I know there is change in the air; I know things are changing. Of course you do because you are connected to the planet and the planet is changing with you on it. This is a beautiful thing because this is the beginning of the metamorphosis.
