

TRUTH LOVE FREEDOM AND JOY

The Compendium of Thought

Truth Love Freedom and Joy – Introduction

Within The Compendium of Thought there is embedded numerous codes and prophesied events that are not detailed in complete defined words. In the section truth love freedom and joy we begin to connect those codes and prophesied events into everyday living.

The way that The Compendium of Thought touches greater mind consciousness and reaches certain entities in exactly the right moment, at exactly the right time, will release an ongoing field that resonates specifically with truth love freedom and joy. This will mean that whomever connects with The Compendium of Thought, at whatever point in time that may occur, each word that is read is picked up and communicated to bring forth greater understanding of truth love freedom and joy everywhere – everywhere – everywhere.

To communicate directly with a mass consciousness that is a long way from those four words meets such powerful resistance that it is a long time before those dots are connected. So rather than attempt to continually awaken a species of individuals determined by the most part to remain asleep, we know that the written, spoken, read, received consciousness in The Compendium of Thought will activate the codes and prophecies that will bring these fields into play.

To make the record straight, this is not a seeded thought, this is a created set of potentials that snowball in their affect because of the ability of the words in The Compendium of Thought to open doors and for those doors to be held open against even the most closed mind. This is the magnificence of the correlating field between truth love freedom and joy and The Compendium of Thought. As it is so it is.

Truth Love Freedom and Joy – Truth

Deep within the circle of who you are there is your own truth, and no one can take that truth away from you. No one can make it any less than what it is. You can manipulate your own truth to look like others, to be like others, to pretend it is like others, and along the way you will have experiences in understanding that your truth when you do that, becomes diluted, and in some way, you lose yourself. This is all right because it is driven from that great place within you which is holding your truth, so every experience that you have is building on the great inner self, that innate knowing of who and what you are.

So, it doesn't really matter if you decide to be a chameleon, a shadow, a mirror, an image, an exact replica, fraud, or a pretender, every single one of those faces is all you learning about your truth. Let's put it like this - it's as if you are trying on things for size. Checking out - does that garment look good with me, do I feel good when I am wearing that, does that resonate with my great truth if I believe and think and know that I am like that? If I copy that identity, does that mean I am greater now that I've done that? All the time that this is happening the great inner truth, the great inner self is learning and showing and growing and being and holding you true. This is truly miraculous because it means that you are always, wherever you are, however it is that you are, representing yourself. You always know who you are.

All those games that you play with yourself pretending to be the king, the queen, the knight, the star, the fairy, the witch, the warlock, the wizard, the pauper, it doesn't matter. All those games that you play with yourself to pretend to be those other things are just you looking and trying on different aspects, but none of it takes away from that great powerful essence that is the absolute truth of who you are. What this means in its nutshell of understanding is that you are completely unique in all diverse multitudinous universes, multi-versus, galaxies, everywhere. There is absolutely nothing no one, no God, no being, no enlightenment, that changes the fact that you are completely unique in everything that there is. There is nothing in the entire creation that is the same as you.

When you understand that powerful incredible truth it means that you can stand in your own garment, in your own self, and never have to mimic another again, and never have to try to be anything else other than who you are, again. And never have to look to others to mirror back to you what you are because you recognise inside of you that you are absolutely the only thing that is like you. This recognition, this point of recognition indicates that at the culmination of all your wisdom you come to one point and that is the point of who you are. And the point of who you are is to be unique in everything in all realities, because if you weren't unique in all realities, then God as you, would crumble in upon itself and start to become a clone of all its identified realities and start to build mimics and copies because it kept thinking that it needed to be greater than what it was or something that it wasn't.

So instead of all those things, when you come into that beautiful essence, right, right, right, inside of you it is the truth of who you are and everything that you are doing and everything that you are playing out in this now, is part of you learning to come back into who you are over and over. In some terms this is the great conquering because what you are fighting against is all the things that you are trying on - I am trying that on for a while how does it fit? When you have stopped trying on everything, pretending to be something you are not, that just comes right back to you and you get to be who you are. The peace and the love and the joy of that moment will explode through the universes because therein everywhere that you are, you get to be you. You get to be you as the divine creator of whatever reality it is that you are part of. You get to be you in the echelons of great thought, you get to be you everywhere.

This is simple in its acceptance and the more you are your truth right now, the easier these words will sing to you. Even if you are trying on another garment - I might just see what it is like to be that person, or that being or that entity I seem to like the look of at the moment, or the feel of or the knowingness of - even if you are doing that right now, this simple truth will bring you so close to who you are that that image you are playing out will enfold into you in an instant. You will realise that all those images you were using, all those garments you were using, you were just trying on for size and nothing could be any greater than what you are. This is the great enfolding - I'm folding back into who I am, and I am ceasing to pretend that I am like any other because I am unique, and I can be nothing other than that.

Everywhere is uniqueness even in the hive minds of collective consciousness or of entities that are intermingled, so closely woven together in their planet that they look almost the same and their mind is almost one. There is uniqueness in every entity because that is not their eternal state. They do not stay for ever and ever as that. They have gone to that planet for those experiences to try that garment on for as long as they choose, but that is not who they are. They are unique in all the universes. If you are bound by collective consciousness on this planet or any other, know that yourself is always unique and it is never bound by anything. The truth of who you are is a source of inspiration to many and you can be no other than that source of inspiration to many because you are so divinely unique. There is only one of you. The world, the planet, the stars and the universe would be at a loss if that unique entity was no more because your uniqueness, everywhere that it is held - which is everywhere that you are in that eternal now, where you are replicated in a trillion different variables, in a trillion different realities - that unique you is holding together infinite amounts of realities just because you are so unique.

Where you are on a planet with purple trees and wafting breezes of scents you have never ever perfumed, your unique footprint on that planet is ensuring that all that reality is held together as it is because of your contribution to the unique state that you are in that place. Without you there it would be like the purple hues suddenly missed a beat. Everything requires everything in its altogether harmonious mix of uniqueness. If you weren't there, that beautiful planet wouldn't be anything like it is because it requires your unique footprint on it. The reason it requires it is because every entity through everywhere is like a unique point in an enormous tapestry that goes on and on forever. If you take that unique point off that tapestry anywhere, it's nothing like it is. Think about this beautiful planet with its purple trees and its wafting scent and then you imagine that a trillion unique points created that, and they are all there right now in the infinite now - past present or future however it is defined. Without one of those points, one of those beautiful unique selves there, it wouldn't be like it is because every unique entity has a place in every reality it chooses to be in. It is holding that unique reality together because it is there as the truth of what it is.

This is the divine in every being shining its truth forth and expressing known and unknown everywhere. There is no other like you. You can scale the highest mountains and go to the furthest depths of consciousness into the eternal forever and you will never find yourself replicated anywhere. This is a fact because only you have put together a myriad of experiences that have made you into who you are, only you. For a point of reflection close your eyes and scan through all known and unknown potentials looking everywhere seeking to find anything that is like you. Go far and deep and move into the depths of consciousness. Look everywhere for you and then recognise the simple truth - I can stop being like anyone else or anything else, and I can just be me, that great I AM.

Truth Love Freedom and Joy – Love

Magnificent changes are occurring now. Right now, in this very moment in your time wherever you are magnificent changes are occurring. The cells are breaking and changing. The past wounds are being healed and the repetitive nature of your spirits competition with itself are now collapsing. The great love that you are is bringing about these changes and without you it would not be possible. Your time as an experimental experience/project - if that is how you wish to understand it - is complete and this moment right now the new phase of reality begins.

We close the doors on the past and we begin that great new chapter. This will occur for everyone everywhere because the power and the momentum of the 4 to 1 is complete. Geometrically opposed opposites have come together in balance. The yes and the no are now recognised as two parts of a whole and we are moving into the new dimension now. There is no place for you to hide anymore from behind these veils where your truth is unseen, and your pain is unknown. With this moment the great change is here. For many we have waited long for this to be observed. The momentum is behind us and just as a great tidal wave eventually crashes to the shore and recedes into the sea and becomes one again, although it has swept millions aside and created enormous change and destruction, it does end, and this is where it is.

You cannot do anything other than observe a world that is filled with love now that the tidal wave has hit. We have been building up to this. Many thought that it would never come about, but still the momentum continued, held in place by those with unwavering and unshakeable truth that the power and the will and the passion to bring forth a greater reality would always materialise. They continued to build and to hold true that great love that surely it would change and that a planet rife with death and destruction, pain and suffering, victimisation and tyranny, could not go on forever. This great tidal wave filled with love behind it is sweeping all along with everyone caught up in its momentum whether they want to or not. There are too many voices supporting and knowing that this truth is here. We have prophesied this for so long. You have read it, you have been promised, hoped and wished, but it took the individual - the you - to make that moment to occur.

It was never going to be enough to just rest on the faith that someone said that this would occur. It took you to trust in that deep knowingness within you that surely the love would find its way through and break even the most treacherous controlled rampant energetic bonds. We have been fighting for so long, each in its individual way. Some in complete simplicity, others in loud rambunctious tones. It didn't matter how each individual approached this moment, it was the unwavering faith that the momentum is now too much to fall or falter. It is as if there is an enormous army behind you - you, right now. And you, whoever you are, at the forefront of that enormous army, whether you are perceived as a leader in your own mind or if you are perceived as a meek tiny humble human. It is this moment that the army is behind you because you have held within you the innate knowing that somehow love would get through and break the treachery that has been here for so long.

Just as a tidal wave would when it reaches that shore - which it has done right now, this moment - absolutely there will be debris and change and systems will crumble. But it was never about the aftermath, it was about the recognition that that love could not be stopped – ever - and the force of it is a tidal wave. We understand collective consciousness, we understand the power of the mind, and we understand how 4 to 1 is an incredibly powerful number and herein we tipped the balance. So, for every point of reference, however you approached it, whatever journey you were led upon, just like the tributaries that would lead to the sea, that would build the tidal wave. Whatever route you took it didn't matter because every one of those tributaries was leading to the same conclusion - the power, the innate power of love, that would do it because it is an unstoppable force.

It is the greatest force of nature. You can envisage the power behind a tidal wave. Imagine the power of the tidal wave, the force of nature that can build such a body of water out of an ocean. You can envisage the power of love that can build out of an ocean of entities, billions on one planet. Tiny voices in the sea and hidden in the coves waiting for a sunny day to come forward, nevertheless all aware. And as that great surge started to build there was some at the front leading the charge, holding that true knowingness, holding the power of love so that others could always see even when it was dark and fearful and treacherous, that there was a way forward and they were never alone. And there built in themselves that tiny glimmer of love and hope which added to the ocean, and the tidal wave lifted the momentum of the power of love, pouring itself forth and then it crashed because it couldn't do anything other.

You see, forward momentum was never meant to sustain an ongoing surge, an ongoing building up. If something never finishes, it's always going to be building up. To what? The crescendo. The crescendo is the peak and then it crashes, and the reality is formed. Right now where you are the reality is formed, and what washes over that earth plane, what washes through as the energy as the tidal wave hits and breathes its life on to the entire consciousness, is something that has never reached anybody yet in the way it will reach them now. Instead of being a lone voice in the ocean holding space, holding the truth of love, just hanging in there at times when everything said it's not possible, there is too much pain, the difference now is you will be supported in ways you have never experienced before.

And here it starts. Feel it, the support, because you were the drop in the ocean, you in whatever way you contributed. If it was to nurture a tiny plant in your hands and be present with the glorious life, you that tiny drop in the ocean will feel more love and support in this moment because without you the tidal wave could not have existed. It doesn't matter how stupid you are in your thinking, how crazy your thoughts are, it's the essence of you that has moved through this. Your brain will be changed, your thinking will be changed, your consciousness will shift because that consciousness is wired to an old energetic pattern that the tidal wave just erased and washed free. Your brain will loosen its load now that these patterns are erased - everywhere right now.

This is the power of love, the great tidal wave of love. Because those energetic patterns no longer exist, treacherous fools will no longer hold power because their power was linked to those energetic patterns which have now been erased. The patterns of fear, the patterns of grief, the patterns of guilt, the patterns of pain, are no longer held in place for darker energies to manipulate you through. And then you start again, and everything is washed clean and you see with clear eyes, a clear mind, an open heart, how glorious it is to love and to love and to love. There can be no resistance to this change any more than you could resist a tidal wave, the momentum is too strong. As it is so it is, and it is complete. This is a miraculous moment.

Truth Love Freedom Joy – Joy

Very few are born with an innate state of joy and when they are it is because they are that much closer to the divine. The innate state of joy as we have clearly recognised in our steps to enlightenment, is a state of enlightenment. Without joy you are not enlightened, you are on your journey. What is miraculous about this is that the divine within you then is always in a state of joy, it is only your external representative that thinks or creates otherwise. To tune your eyes, your ears, your feelings, your emotions to innate joy to the insider who knows nothing other than joy, is long for many. You can remember somehow the truth of the insider that is joy and relieves you of all your burdens when you are housed there. When you find the insider, that joy can do no other than affect the external skin, the voice, the eyes, the spring in your step, the lushness of your hair, the tone in your voice. The sounds your ears are tuned to return to this receiver; joy, it never left you, you just forgot how to perceive it.

Sometimes you could hit highs that feel like joy, and of course they are, those great rising bounds of energy that light up everything. Then you can play with that reflection on others and dampen your joy because you don't feel you should be so happy when others are sad. But that makes no sense now, because the spirit inside is always happy, always in a state of joy. Who is fooling who when you pretend not to be happy because you worry about others? Innate joy is like a power that sparkles all around you, creates light fields that shimmer and can be seen from far away as it radiates off your body in the pure state of joy. The magic of joy is that it encapsulates the other three stages into itself, because with pure joy you are love, you have freedom, and you know truth. It is the one state that holds them all, and the other three are steps towards building greater and greater joy, even if some would say love is the only force, or freedom of the spirit is the divine within, or being your truth.

You only need to look at one of those and know that what it ignites inside is joy. When you dive a little deeper into freedom, you can do no other than smile with the joy of knowing that freedom is yours. Joy has this infectious nature because it is the spirit communicating with the spirit, bringing it back out of its shell. Let it out it says, let it out. Stop hiding it away pretending that you don't know that inside of you there really is only joy. And when you have this great lens of joy that reflects upon your reality, you can do no other than love everything in your life whether it be 'joyful or not', because joy overrides the perceived reality when it is innate. It is the state of masters and gods who can walk on the earth and observe atrocities yet retain the true essence of that which they are - the innate state, the divine within.

It's not that they laugh and dance of atrocities that they may see, that would be folly. It is that they are unaffected because all they know is the innate state of the divine within them. You could imagine that like an inner shell and an outer shell, and that inner shell is your divine spirit that is only joy. The outer shell carries the chemicals and the infusion of emotions and structure of the body that stores those emotions and houses varying forms of pain, discomfort, that presses in on the inner shell until that little voice of joy becomes so faint. That spirit inside is so faint because it is burdened by all the layers of the outer shell that are convinced that really life is very difficult and unpleasant. Then you can turn back on that little light in an instant; it's as if everything washes away.

So, the question would be why suffer when you know this? Are you so used to picking up those old dirty chemicals that wish to strip you of your joy, innate as it is? Everywhere in your brain there are receiving units, little receptor sites that receive impulses via thoughts, and those little receptor sites take on what you think and then convert it into an experience for your body to feel. Could it be possible, just as the masters know that you can observe and think things - unpleasant as they may be - and the receptor site is so tuned - that tiny little gap - to the state of joy that it never wavers? For a while you may wonder, almost as if it is an unfair advantage against everyone else on the planet - save a few that were born with this innate in them and didn't have to work it out - unfair to just be happy for no reason. How can that be?

Surely we have to do something or think something or see something or interact to create in a self the experience of joy. But that would only be the outer shell because the inner shell always knows joy. It may be a struggle to move at times from one state to another when your thoughts or your reality projected around you is not supporting you. This little flick of a switch when you can observe where joy is, means that it is always there in every single moment. So shed your skin and let's get started. Meaning let's just turn it on now and find out how beautifully life responds to you when you disagree with the other 7 billion people on the planet who refuse, or have forgotten, or don't know, that there even is a perpetual state of joy which is innate within every single human regardless, just as the divine spirit is.

You could not be a walking, moving, talking, physical, living entity if you did not have a spirit guiding that beautiful form that you hold, and the force of the spirit is in an eternal state of joy, innate in its being. The spirit does not have a bad day, it is always aligned with joy because that is its natural way of being. And it doesn't analyse if that is okay based on the circumstances presented that day. And it doesn't discuss with itself that it can be joyful now and not later. It just is joy and you know that because you are one of those lucky few that were born already wired in an innate state of joy, a built-in pathway. Never forget this, and the next time your friend may be struggling with the outer shell, tap them on the shoulder and remind them of the truth of what lies inside. Joy is always there just as the love is always there, and that is the truth and the freedom to live that truth.

God is ever so gracious. "Go ahead and be in a state of joy", God said, "nothing other." "Go and be as I am." God is not cranky, sad or melancholy, it is always in a state of joy. And just for qualification here, joy does not have to be rambunctious and loud and boisterous. Joy can be peaceful and present and felt within and not necessarily a large display of loud music and fanfare. Joy is innate, it just is. If you meet somebody and you don't think that they are very joyful because they are quiet, perhaps what they are showing you is the beauty of joy on a quiet summer day, as opposed to the surfer on the wave drawing joy from the moment by the outer shell of that experience. Now we get to imagine for this moment how much greater life could and will be knowing that joy is innate and our experiences - all of them - can't be anything different to us.

As we are driven forward by the spirit to have these wonderful unknown adventures and experiences that are so magical, we know now we're not chasing joy, we are merely being it. Aligning with your spirit brings you into a state of joy. It is then up to you whether you choose to recognise that your spirit was always aligned with you and it was always in a state of joy. Never be shy to be joyful. It is time the other 7 billion people on the planet know what you know. And when you drop the facade that making things happen will create your joy – which in many cases it does and we accept that that vibrational frequency is indeed a joyful one to reside in - when you accept that is not innate but merely a spike on a never-ending curve that goes up and down, you will know that your innate state of joy will direct you clearly. You will always be in alignment with the spirit, and always guided by the spirit that you are because of that innate state of joy. And you are not chasing the spirit, you are it. This is the beginning of the great state of joy. It is not out there; it is inside of you and always has been.

Truth Love Freedom and Joy – Freedom

When freedom started to be heard it was like a catch call that was picked up everywhere - more like a whisper to start with. And then it found its way everywhere. Few had ever understood or experienced freedom, but it was always the desire to do so. As they left behind the shackles of their imprisonment, they realised that freedom was always going to find its way through like a beacon announcing its path of enlightenment and enrichment with illumination that suddenly burst through the atmosphere bringing with that a new heaven and a new earth that none could deny. Suddenly it became a picture, an image, that was represented in the mind. Although the image could not be replicated exactly to every individual, enough of an image was given that it provided a walking waking state where freedom could be felt and known within the mind of the individual. And that held consciousness trapped in the mind and the body, programmed heavily, lost, suddenly broke out of the binds and saw with clear eyes the truth. That truth was ever so powerful in the moment it recognised true freedom could and does exist once those shackles are broken and escape from prison is imminent because the entity knows they can never be held ever again.

It started with thought, it started with the picture. A simple picture to represent freedom inside, knowingness inside, and that freedom became so powerfully interwoven into genetic forms within the person that they knew a great shift had occurred. Somehow that day when the force was so powerfully tuned to love against all odds, love and its infinite power took hold and gave forth a message of freedom. It was the freedom from the shackles and the imprisonment. And in the moment when that freedom was held and known that the entity could move through any wall, disappear, reappear on the outside of that prison, a true message of freedom was provided that had not been heard for thousands of years - to know that the flesh and blood of the body truly can de-materialise and re-materialise anywhere, and that it wasn't a fairy tale or an impossible dream.

Suddenly the finesse of freedom and the meaning of what it is started to be pictured in minds everywhere, and no longer would the entities feel bound to their flesh and blood, captured in their walls, shackled to their floor. They knew that something had changed, and they really were free, and the forces that had suppressed this deeper state of awareness could no longer fight an invisible foe. It was not that they had overcome, it was that through that great wave of love and the extraordinary truth and the uniqueness of the individual, the true message of freedom was released. You knew that every time you had died and been reborn, it was like a practice skill you had forgotten you could do to take your divine essence out of the body, and then reform the body to place the divine essence back into. So few have mastered this because there has been this innate block to freedom. It is when the entity knows that no walls can hold it and that there are no shackles, it is always free to walk out the door.

The freedom magnified in many others that day when they all collectively shared the pictures that up until then were reserved for the select few. The reason that freedom was retained by a select few in those times was because you were not ready to be able to clearly move. You did not know enough to ensure that you would not keep dipping back into your past each time you moved, and all we saw was death and destruction, pain and suffering, as skills were revealed before the time was ready. The time is now ready. You have built yourself into this grand crescendo filled with the love of God and now the outcome of that enormous tidal wave is freedom. Freedom without restriction, qualification or the determination of what someone else's definition of freedom may be. This powerful magnified event where the image of freedom is loaded into the consciousness to be picked up by many entities, then starts the unfurling of a program booting in freedom. And as it is booted into one it replicates in many, so the observer of its self can only see freedom within and without because others are now suddenly awake to their freedom as well.

The potential for chaos was great but with the new wave of love that has hit and generated such a powerful supportive network, freedom can now begin to be integrated completely with the minds and hearts of many so that they will leave their foreign turf and familiar garments and begin a new life of freedom. And that freedom will never cease from that moment forward because it was ordained, prophesied, that this would occur for everyone at the same time on this planet. Keeping yourself outside of the system will ensure this move, transition, and recognition of true freedom in your reality, now becomes an observable effect. As more and more entities observe in their reality their own innate freedom, they no longer hold a program that makes them think they are trapped by any circumstance. This is interwoven into consciousness - that there is freedom and there always has been. It is here now for you to carefully take your word and become free without any foolish notions that the only way you would be free would be if the state told you so. Freedom is returned to the individual.

Please send this to anyone you choose. All we ask is, you let them know of the website The Compendium of Thought so they have their own experiences there.